We are not in a war against terrorism!

We are not in a war against terrorism! We are in a war against Muslim jihadists. Terror is their tactic. In WW 11, we were in a war against Germany, Japan, and Italy. Bullets and bombs were their – and our – tactics. To say that we are in a war against terror would be like saying that we were in a war against bullets in WW 11. Most Muslims are not terrorists, but most terrorists are Muslims.

We have a president that we know little about. We do know that his father was Muslim, and we do know that he has friends like Bill Ayers and Jeremiah Wright. We know that he is a disciple of Saul Alinsky, and that he bows to Saudi royalty. We know that he called the terrorist attack at Fort Hood “workplace violence”, and he doesn’t want us to jump to conclusions about the reasons for the Boston Muslim jihadist attack. We know that he was complicit in bringing the Muslim Brotherhood to power in Egypt, and he is giving them F-16 fighter jets, as well as billions of your dollars.

We know that he has no job history that would qualify him to be the CEO of a small company in the real world. We know that he lives like no other president in history. He has spent hundreds of millions of dollars flying a fleet of airplanes around the world, constantly campaigning and vacationing. We know that his beliefs are “evolving”, and he has become pro-abortion, and pro gay marriage. We know that he is anti-Christian – the US Army has declared Southern Baptists and Catholics as “hostile to the Army.” We know that Christians are being persecuted all over the world, and he is saying nothing in protest, and continuing to shower the Muslim Brotherhood in Egypt with dollars. They are chief among the persecutors of Christians.

A few years ago, the children of Israel were being governed by judges, and they were jealous of their neighbors who were governed by kings. Samuel was the chief of the judges, and the people clamored for a king. God warned them through Samuel that they would suffer under a king, but they insisted, and God appointed Saul. That didn’t work out so well.

Six years ago, the children of the US apparently wanted a king – or at least a president who would give us stuff. Well, he is giving us stuff. How’s that working out for ya?

When despots tell us what evil plans they have, we tend to not believe. Hitler wrote Mein Kampf, and Churchill was one of the few leaders who believed that he meant what he said. Now we don’t believe Morsi of Egypt and Ahmadinejad of Iran. Morsi said Israelis are “bloodsuckers” and “the descendents of apes and pigs.” Ahmadinejad has said he will “destroy” them.

Jihadist Imams have been widely quoted on how they will conquer the West. They will take Western Europe by the ballot box, and they will destroy the economy of the US. It seems to me that our government is well on the way to destroying our economy without any help from jihad. Is there a chance that it's being done on purpose?

About a century ago, my lawyer told me that I was the only person he knew who started at the top in the real estate business, and learned the business on the way down. I hurt a couple of banks and a few investors, but they weren't ruined.

The Oval Office is not a good place for on the job training. The free world could be ruined on the way down.

My favorite philosopher is not Plato or Socrates; it's Pogo. I stopped reading the comics when he retired. My favorite quote of his applies now.

"We have met the enemy, and he is us."

Most of our problems are but symptoms of our biggest problem. Our churches have failed. Our families are failing, and we are kicking God out of our culture.
